

Curriculum Units by Fellows of the Yale-New Haven Teachers Institute
1996 Volume II: Environmental and Occupational Health: What We Know; How We Know; What We Can Do

Preface

In March 1996, eighty-two teachers from the New Haven Public Schools became Fellows of the Yale-New Haven Teachers Institute to prepare new curricular materials for school courses. Established in 1978, the Institute is a partnership of Yale University and the New Haven Public Schools, designed to strengthen teaching and improve learning of the humanities and the sciences in our community's schools. Through the Institute, Yale faculty members and school teachers join in a collegial relationship. The Institute is also an interschool and interdisciplinary forum for teachers to work together on new curricula. The Institute has repeatedly received national recognition as a pioneering and successful model of university-school collaboration that integrates curriculum development with intellectual renewal for teachers.

Teachers had primary responsibility for identifying the subjects the Institute would address. Between October and December 1995, Institute Representatives canvassed teachers in each New Haven elementary, middle, and high school to determine the subjects they would like the Institute to treat. The Institute then circulated descriptions of seminars that encompassed teachers' interests. In applying to the Institute, teachers described unit topics on which they proposed to work and the relationship of these topics to Institute seminars and to courses they would teach in the coming school year. Six seminars were organized, corresponding to the principal themes of the Fellows' proposals. The seminar entitled "Environmental and Occupational Health: What We Know; What We Can Do" was led by Mark R. Cullen, M.D., Professor of Medicine and of Epidemiology and Public Health. Between March and August, Fellows participated in seminar meetings, researched their topics, and attended a series of lectures by Yale faculty members.

The curriculum units Fellows wrote are their own; they are presented in six volumes, one for each seminar. A list of the 115 volumes of Institute units published between 1978 and 1996 appears on the following pages. Guides to each year's units, a topical Index of all 1024 units written between 1978 and 1996, and reference lists showing the relationship of the units to school curricula are available from the Institute. An electronic version of many of these curricular resources is accessible by connecting to the Institute's World Wide Web site (<http://www.yale.edu/ynhti/>).

The units that follow contain four elements: objectives, teaching strategies, sample lessons and classroom activities, and lists of resources for teachers and students. They are intended primarily for the use of Institute Fellows and their colleagues who teach in New Haven.

The DeWitt Wallace-Reader's Digest Fund and the National Endowment for the Humanities have provided the Yale-New Haven Teachers Institute major grants in the form of both endowment and program support. In addition, a number of individuals and foundations, notably the William Randolph Hearst Foundation, have made gifts and grants toward the Endowment Fund for the Teachers Institute. The 1996 Institute was supported also by grants from the Pew Charitable Trusts, the Howard Hughes Medical Institute, Xerox Foundation, the Sherman Fairchild Foundation, and the Arthur Vining Davis Foundations. The materials presented here do not necessarily reflect the views of the funding agencies.
